UCLA * INSTITUTE OF THE ENVIRONMENT * REEF CHECK

In 2003, I teamed up with UCLA's Institute of the Environment to study coral reef health in the Pacific. I received training for laying transects, recognizing indicator species, recording data, and reporting findings back to Dr. Gregor Hodson at UCLA. Over the past fifteen years, I have personally led student research groups to the Fijian islands as well as serving as the program director for teams gathering data on three different islands. IGS sets up homestays for students in Fijian villages as they conduct their research. Results are submitted to local officials, regional politicians, and the Institute of the Environment to map changes in reef health on three Fijian islands. Our transects = 100m length / 5m wide. Monitoring includes: 1) fish count for nine indicator species; 2) ten benthic cover indicators (soft coral to silt); 3) crown of thorns numbers; 4) invertebrate counts; 5) review and conclusions on reef health over time. Example: <http://www.cultural-ecology.com/Lawaki.htm>

PROGRAM DIRECTOR FOR BELOW REPORTS

2018 Report on reef front Lawaki Beach Resort, Beqa, Fiji

- Evidence of coral bleaching
- Decreased indicator fish diversity compared to 2012

2012 Report on reef front Lawaki Beach Resort, Beqa, Fiji

- High numbers of butterfly fish
- Increased coral diversity compared to 2010

2011 Report on Marine Protected Area, Taveuni, Fiji

- Lower numbers of indicator fish species compared to 2010
- Possible illegal fishing by locals

2010 Report on reef front, Lawaki Beach Resort, Beqa, Fiji

- Increase in silt benthic cover compared to 2003 report
- Decline in species #'s for both coral and indicator fish

2010 Report on Marine Protected Area, Taveuni, Fiji

- Species counts similar to 2008 findings
- Local village council is monitoring the reef

2008 Report on Marine Protected Area, Taveuni, Fiji

- Healthy invertebrate numbers
- Excellent diversity of coral present

2007 Report on Marine Protected Area: Lawaki, Fiji

- No evidence of illegal village fishing
- Healthy levels of indicator species

2006 Report on Marine Protected Area: Beqa, Fiji

- Deterioration of reef compared to 2003 report
- Increased crown of thorns damage

2006 Report on Waitabu Marine Park, Viti Levu, Fiji

- Anchor damage recorded
- Indicator species show diverse population

2003 Report on Marine Protected Area: Beqa, Fiji

- Crown of thorns damage reported
- Low impact by nearby resort
